ADVICE FOR BUSY PEOPLE
FROM ST FRANCIS DE SALES (1567-1622)

The diligence and care with which we should attend to our business affairs must never be confused with anxiety and worry. Care and diligence are compatible with tranquillity and peace of mind; anxiety, scrupulosity and agitation are not.

Be careful and diligent in all your affairs, for God who has committed these things to your care would want things done well in accord with his will, but without your care and attention degenerating into nervous anxiety. Do not hurry or excite yourself because this will undermine your judgement and prevent you executing your responsibilities effectively.

Nothing is ever done well that is done with haste and impetuosity. We should take time to listen, in accordance with the advice of Solomon: "He that is in haste is in danger of stumbling". We will accomplish our duties in good time when we take time to do them properly. Try, then, to meet the decisions facing you quietly, one at a time. If you try to do everything at once or out of order, your spirit will be so overcharged and depressed that it will probably sink under the burden without achieving anything.

In all your undertakings rely wholly on God's providential care, through which alone comes success. Work steadily on your part, seeking always to co-operate with God's designs. Then you may be assured, that if you trust all to God, whatever happens will indeed be the best for you, whether it seems in your own judgment good or bad

My meaning in all this is that amid the affairs and duties of life, we should be sure to look more to God than to them. And when our duties are of such importance that they demand our undivided attention, then we should still make sure that from time to time we cast a look towards, God, rather like sailors who in setting their course for port look more at the stars of heaven than the open sea. In so doing God will work with you and in you and for you, and you will not labour in vain but will be filled with God's consolations.
